

Birmingham Creative Round Table

There's creative writing, there's professional writing—then there come along opportunities to blend the two. Every professional writer dreams of doing the best work, getting ahead in the industry, or bursting onto the scene with fresh innovations and a sense of personal style, but the Birmingham professional might be wondering: “Where can I get the support I need to bounce off ideas and connect with other aspiring go-getters in this little metropolitan area?” The answer is closer to home than you think, and only takes an hour out of your monthly time.

The Birmingham Creative Round Table is a blossoming meeting group of professionals, creatives, entrepreneurs, and even bloggers that come together once a month to discuss ways of cultivating new ideas for the business and professional world. The coffee is local, the pastries are fresh, and the faces are friendly. Each month, the Birmingham Creative Round Table brings together those who want to thrive in today's workforce, seeking to uplift those who might be struggling creatively and to energize ideas that might have run dry. An hour-long meeting with a guest speaker specially chosen from the creative and professional spheres sparks intriguing conversations in an informal setting, where guests can ask questions they may be too apprehensive to email to an employer. The concept of networking is not lost at the Round Table. In fact, it is encouraged, and there is no better way to step out of the box and shake a future employer's hand than with face-to-face interaction and guidance from professionals who want to broaden their industries as well.

The budding professional writer might ask “Do I fit into to this creative group?” The Birmingham Creative Round Table is meant not only for analysts, designers, creative directors, and local brick-and-mortar managers, but writers of all styles and inspirations. In fact, professional writers should flock to these monthly meetings; there is no better way to make your writing stand out in the world than to surround yourself with positive industry feedback and ideas. Copywriters from local advertising agencies and rhetorical designers that work with local businesses congregate there frequently. A hopeful professional writer may find themselves swamped with competition to fulfill the duties of a strictly safe document designer and provide the best examples of a creative craft in order to garner clients and gain company attention. The Creative Round Table is a perfect safe space to hone one's abilities and designs while getting a sense of what it means to be a professional writer from people who live and breathe the industry.