The COVID-19 Testing and Prevention in Alabama’s K-12 Schools program was the largest single funded grant in the history of the UAB School of Public Health at $142 million. The program administered more than 925,000 tests.

One more thing

Mark your calendars

 Trevino House

Programs & Services:

Events Calendar

Things to know

Panel Discussion: Learning to Navigate Social Media at UAB

Hear a panel of experts discuss how social media is utilized in the workplace and the ethical considerations of content creation.

More news online

More news online

Research & learning

Panel Discussion: Integrity to Influence

Join a panel discussion with Black UAB alumni as they discuss their journey to leadership through recognition, service, and collaboration between UAB and the Economic Burden Research Network, a contemporary R&B is dedicated to crafting

More news online

Want to publish Open Access? Funding is available through UAB Libraries to help cover costs of publication.

One more thing

Public Health’s major effort against COVID: By the numbers

Using a handheld ultrasound device, a trained clinician can rapidly and accurately diagnose anything from kidney stones to heart function, saving time and money for patients in rural and urban underserved areas. A major grant is allowing UAB to lead the

More news online

One more thing

Public Health's major effort against COVID: By the numbers

Using a handheld ultrasound device, a trained clinician can rapidly and accurately diagnose anything from kidney stones to heart function, saving time and money for patients in rural and urban underserved areas. A major grant is allowing UAB to lead the

More news online

One more thing

Public Health’s major effort against COVID: By the numbers

Using a handheld ultrasound device, a trained clinician can rapidly and accurately diagnose anything from kidney stones to heart function, saving time and money for patients in rural and urban underserved areas. A major grant is allowing UAB to lead the